BEFORE Reading	Statement	AFTER Reading
	Everyone is born with the same chance to succeed in life.
	In a good society, people will make friends with other people when they are by themselves and lonely.
	Words don't really hurt. People get stronger instead of being weak.
	Our first impressions about someone are important and we can tell who a person really is if we pay attention to what we see during that first meeting.
	Parents should protect their children from getting hurt by society.
	We should hide or fix parts of ourselves that we think aren't attractive.
	When adults make rules and tell kids to obey them, kids should break the rules so they can make memories that will last forever.
	No matter what happens between best friends, they will really be friends forever and will always remember the good times they had between them.
	Everyone is beautiful.
